She has been a part of the Department of Physiology from last more than three years with a combined experience of more than six years to her credit. She has been actively involved in all the activities of the Department – both academic and research. She has been involved in teaching of Physiology to students of Medical and Allied Health Sciences. Apart from being academically sound she also has an acumen for research with more than 10 publications to her credit in this short period. Her field of Interest Are Metabolic Disorders and Central Nervous System Disorders. She has presented papers in conference of state/ national/ international level and is currently working in field of endocrine system. She has published her Thesis on the Title “Evaluation of Diabetic Neuropathy Changes in Newly Diagnosed Patients of Type 2 Diabetes Mellitus (T2DM)” in journal of repute. The title she has worked on is of immense importance as many patients with T2DM are long time asymptomatic before a diagnosis is made. Hence, many patients already have complications.
